THE BRIEF

A holiday activity book needed to be live before the season.

Built to read at thumbnail size.

1 A bold age badge

The age range sits where a parent looks first, so the right reader finds it.

2 A clear content promise

"70+ Puzzles, Games & Drawing Pages" tells buyers what they get.

3 Title hierarchy

The title stacks in three sizes so it stays readable on a phone.

4 One story thread

Ava, Eli and Pip in the car tie the cover to the pages inside.

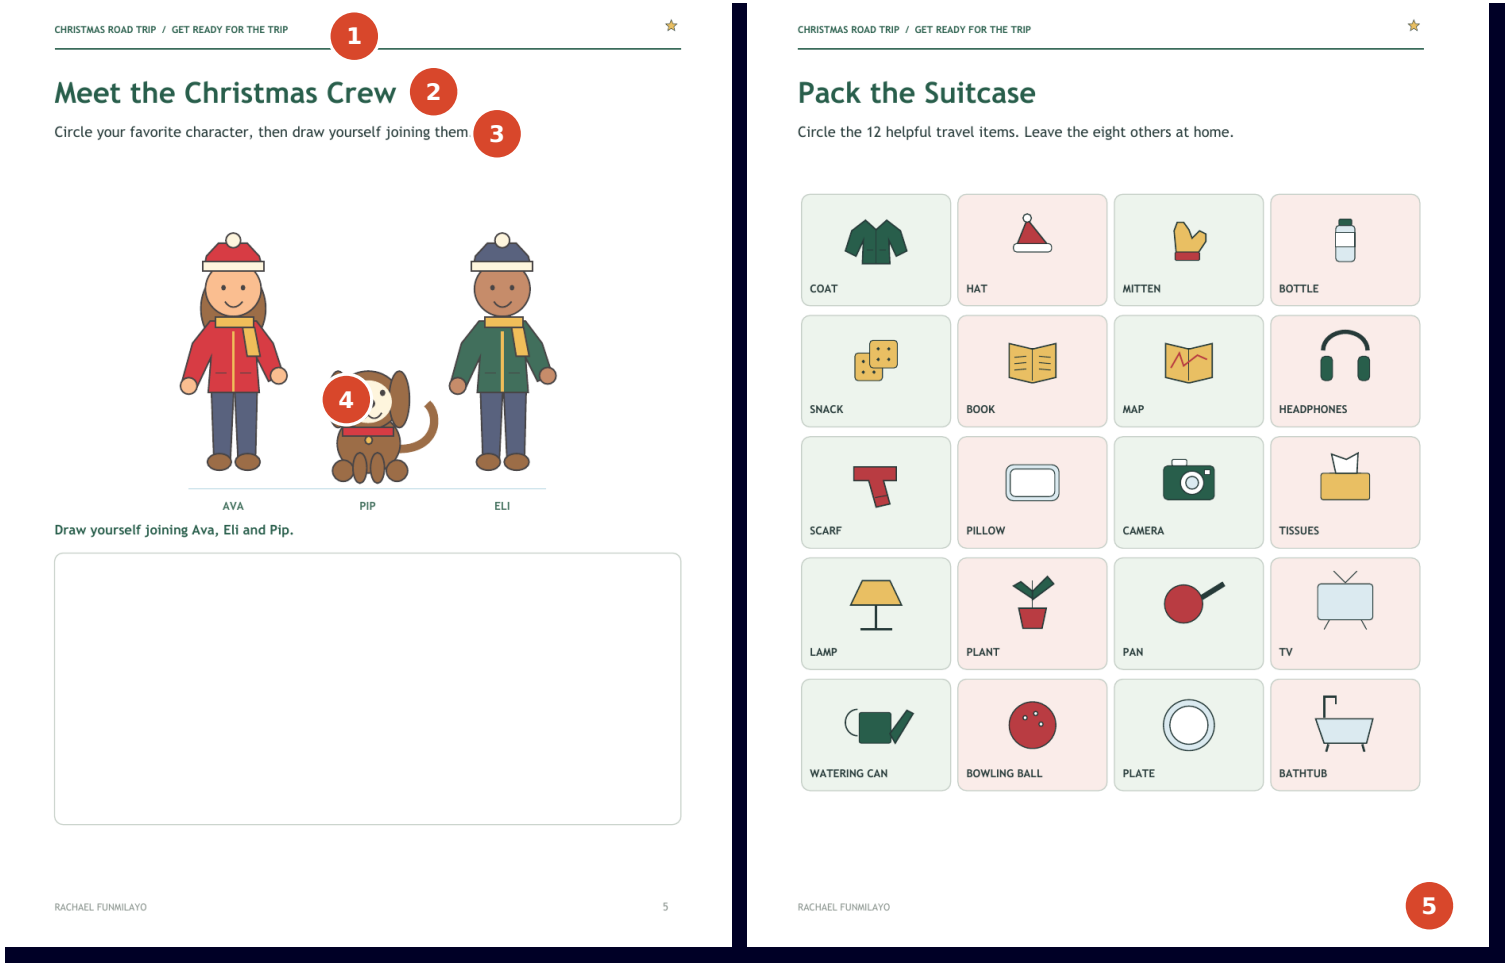

5 A quiet author block

The author name sits low, away from the title.

6 Holiday cues

Gifts, trees and snowflakes keep the Christmas feel in the art.

Every page follows the same layout.

1 Section header

Each page names its section, so kids know where they are.

2 Clear page title

One short title tells the child what to do.

3 One-line instruction

A single sentence explains the activity, so children can start alone.

4 Story thread

Ava, Eli and Pip return on the pages to keep the journey going.

5 Page numbers

Every page is numbered, so the answer key is easy to check.

KEY DECISIONS

Seven choices, made for parents and children.

01

A cover built for phone browsing

Most parents browse on their phones. The age range and the 70+ puzzles line stay readable at thumbnail size.

02

One story across every section

Ava, Eli and Pip appear throughout the book, so it feels like one journey, not a random puzzle collection.

03

Trust for parents

Every puzzle has a checked answer key, organized by page number, so parents can help without guessing.

04

Safety built in

Car game pages note seat belts and never distracting the driver. Drawing and writing are saved for safe stops.

05

A layout children can follow alone

Every page has a section header, a clear title, a one-line instruction and page numbers.

06

Paperback and hardcover only

A write-in activity book works best on paper, so I skipped a Kindle edition on purpose.

07

A warm ending

The book closes with an Explorer Certificate and a gentle prompt for parents to leave an honest Amazon review.

THE THREAD

Every choice served one of two readers: the parent buying the book and the child using it.

THE RESULT

Both editions are live for holiday shopping.

WHAT THE AUTHOR SAYS

Working with AbdulQudus Tella was a wonderful experience. He helped bring my book, Christmas Road Trip Activity Book, to life with an impressive level of professionalism and attention to detail.

From preparing the book's interior and formatting the content to creating the illustrations and designing professional covers for both paperback and hardcover editions, he handled every stage with care and creativity. He also guided the publishing process and successfully helped me get my book published on Amazon KDP.

What I appreciated most was having someone who understood the entire process, paid attention to the little details, and was committed to delivering a quality finished product. The final book came together beautifully, and I am genuinely pleased with the work.

I would gladly recommend AbdulQudus to any author looking for reliable, professional support to turn their manuscript into a well-prepared, professionally designed and published book.
